V SURF'S UP

Inspired by her affinity for Malibu's wave-catching community, designer Kelly Wearstler's recently launched line of decorative boards offers beach enthusiasts (as well as the design obsessed!) a chance to bring a part of iconic surf culture into their homes. "I named this board after Mulholland Drive," notes Wearstler. "It's a soulful and spirited sculpture that pays homage to the exclusive style of the West Coast." Each of The Bath Club Estates' 13 chic living quarters claims its own individual floor and includes membership to what will soon be Miami Beach's most exclusive outdoor club and pool area. Helming the project's landscape design is Laurinda Spear of Miami's ArquitectonicaGEO. "When you enter the property from its Collins Avenue entrance, you're immediately ensconced in a tranquil ambience, full of reflecting pools and floating gardens," notes Spear. "The idea was to create a dramatic shift from the noise of South Beach." Upon venturing further into the posh environs, visitors are met with sumptuous lounge areas, several elevated gardens and green roofs, as well as layers of private pools and sun decks, manifesting in a groundbreaking approach to outdoor design. ## SOPHISTICATED STATE ^

Landscape designer Deena Bell Llewellyn's aesthetic is rooted in timeless good looks and clean geometry that complements both the home's architecture and its natural surroundings. The landscape program for this handsome Coral Gables estate by architect Ramon Pacheco and A&C Builders was no exception. Mediterranean in style, the meticulously arranged tropical plantings and crisp lawn reflect the symmetrical nature of the home's façade. Using Italian cobblestone for detail and robust limestone for shade, as well as an array of exotic palms and shrubs native to the area, Bell Llewellyn created a layout that is clearly defined with plenty of texture and color.
